Society and Law

Society and Law

“Without law, society cannot survive. Law is a tie to the society that creates, upholds, and maintains it”.

Society and the law are intertwined. Nothing can be understood without any one of them. Without the law, society turns into a lifeless. Law also requires modification in line with societal changes, because Law cannot advance with society without the required modifications. Without the supervision of the law, society devolves into a jungle, or at least a primitive state. So, to keep a peaceful society, we need to maintain the connection between the law and society.

A society's legal framework is ingrained there. Therefore, it suggests that law is socially and historically created in order to become legally recognized institutions and processes, and in addition, law requires a community in order to be successful and beneficial. Law is the guiding principle for society that prevents people from going outside the bounds and breaking established regulations, rules, policies, or conventions, ensuring that happiness is attained without bloodshed, peace, and harmony. Humans are weak animals in society who are readily influenced by even the slightest hint of materialistic rewards like wealth, power, or pleasures, which can lead to undesirable behaviour that results in the formation of limits. It is difficult to separate law from society because laws today are formed in response to human behaviour. It seems that society is the primary driver of legislation. The process of law formulation emerges from disagreement when one or two disagree in any area, which is why mediators intervene in developing agreed ways of controlling reoccurrence of disputes in a society, creating an atmosphere of self-government. Imagine a world where there is no law and criminals are not punished; this would be in line with the adage "survival of the fittest." The lack of laws in the society would allow for a lifeless foundation for the community. The law serves the purpose of regulating social communication and establishing norms that are acceptable to the community or society as a whole. People comply with the law in order to preserve social order and to live within its bounds. Law does not, however, succeed in preventing social inequality. Instead, regardless of one's social standing, the law simply establishes the guidelines that must be followed.

Dr. Shweta Gehlot

Law and Morality

Law and Morality

Law and morality are two normative systems that control and regulate behaviors in a human community so as to allow harmonious and effective intersubjectivity between individuals who recognize one another as bearers of rights. Both notions have their common foundation in the concept of individual autonomy and equal respect for everyone. They have a complementary relationship. Law compensates for the functional weaknesses of morality and morality tempers the mechanical implementation of positive law through the notions of solidarity and responsibility. Different legal thinkers have interpreted the relationship between law and morality in different ways. On one hand, there are those who argue that law and morality are independent – though not unrelated. For this first group, a law cannot be disregarded merely because it is morally indefensible. On the other hand, there are those who maintain that law and morality are interdependent. For this second group, any law that claims to regulate behavioral expectations must be in harmony with moral norms. Approached from this perspective, the law must be enacted in such a way that it secures the welfare of the individual and the good of the community. Thus, the aim of all laws should be both the attainment of the end of the state and the common good of the community, both immediate and ultimate. For Habermas, law and morality deal with the same problem: legitimately ordering interpersonal relationships through justified norms.

Mr. Subhash Mahiya

Constitution of India: Supreme law of India

Constitution of India: Supreme law of India

Many of us have come across this term which laws of land now, what does it actually mean?

When we talk about the constitution, constitution is a document which is the basic grundnorm which provides a way towards creating a better legal framework, laws and rules dedicated towards the lawfulness in any country.

In most of the countries, constitution including Indian Constitution including Indian Constitution is the major and most important law which helps in establishing the legal system of whole of the state and contains provisions and rules regarding numerous subject matters and areas which help the people of nation in assistance or regarding disputes

Constitution in India is regarded as supreme law of land because in Article 14 of the Constitution it is clearly mentioned that the 'Rule of law' should be applicable and will be upon to the law and the constitution is the main provider of such laws and rules and regulation from Constitution they take them. So, the constitution can now be completely amended and repealed and each and every citizen have to abide by the constitution because as we say for the people, by the people, we the people in preamble of our constitution.

And hence, constitution is regarded as the Supreme Law of the land and no law is superior to it and will also never be superior to it and will also never be superior in future and constitution will always be regarded as super and supreme law of land.

In the words of Dr. BR Ambedkar

“Constitution is not a mere lawyers document, it is a vehicle of life, and its spirit is always the spirit of age.”

The Social Runway

The Social Runway....

5-year wedlock, 2-year motherhood, a happy family life, now life took a sweet turn and I got an EMPLOYMENT. Steeply, I started feeling EMPOWERED got an opportunity to step out of my comfort zone and EARN some money on my own. Felt grounded, focused, confident, more over happy. This was my perspective but with the real challenges besides, the concept of empowerment got combine with the word FEMINISM in my mind, where I realised grossing or occupation doesn't count as empowerment but in actual sense LIBERATION in the contemplations process of human leads to actual empowerment.

Excluding the above story there are women who doesn't find their journey to be this simple like mine. Still the existence of misogyny can be spotted in our society where women are at constant war and prisoner of their own gender. From the womb to the doom they are facing chain reaction of SOCIAL TABOOS. The choice of identity is still a dream for most of the women. Belonging from a well knowledgeable family it shakes me to the core that even the literate people doesn't understand WHAT A FEMALE ASPIRE?

I sense the 4th wave of Feminism is reigning and operating for a better future for women. Feminism is never about disrespecting or hating men but desiring gender equality in all vocabularies and segments of life. Earlier waves were based upon freedom to vote, subjugation of women's rights, social and economic justice for working women, issues of intersectionality, voicing out against sexual harassment. Currently we are going through 4th wave of feminism, a journey worthwhile where social media has been playing a key role. Movements like #MeToo, TimesUp! have given a platform and a push to women to come up and discuss their suffering so that they can seek justice. This is how growth of feminism has been perceived in past and now the whole world stands at a position where all the supplications of feminism have come together in the form of multi-dimensional movement. Feminism is for all, not restrict to female, as I strongly feel; women and men weren't born this way what our society has portrayed in the past years but they are raised this way. We as a human instead of winning the race and fighting the gender based battles, should come together and focus on ending this battle which every woman is fighting worldwide every second.

Importance of Newsletter

A newsletter is a printed or electronic report containing news concerning the activities of a business or an organization that is sent to its members, customers, employees or other subscribers. At BM law students and teachers have become part of our family because of the daily interactions that happen among us study of law is not limited to teaching and learning as mentioned in the books social interactions play a major role in the practice of law. Lawyers are considered social engineers because their profession consists of bringing reforms thus transforming society at large. When we mention reforms brought by lawyers the first name that comes to mind is Shanti Bhushan. He is considered the lawyer because of whom Indira Gandhi had to impose an emergency.

Indira Gandhi had won the Rae Bareilly seat in the 1971 General Election with a two-to-one margin of popular vote and went on to become the Prime Minister but her opponent Raj Narain had accused him of using government resources for personal gains his case was fought by Shanti Bhushan who was already an hot-shot in the legal field it was the for the first time for an Indian Prime Minister to be cross-examined before the High Court in the decision held Indira Gandhi guilty of Electoral Malpractices later an appeal was made in Supreme Court of India where Justice V.R. Krishna Iyer upheld the decision of Allahabad High Court getting to know about which two prominent leaders namely Jayaprakash Narayan called for daily anti-governmental protests. Jayaprakash Narayan was a powerful leader of that time and after the court verdict, he made a statement to a police officer to reject government orders if the order is immoral and unethical. This statement was taken as a sign of inciting rebellion in the country. Later that day, within three hours arrests were made of political leaders and the electricity supply was cut.

Truth is the last pillar on which social orders remain but it is us as a society, a

Harsh Reality of Teenage

Teenage, is the most crucial and critical phase of your life. Your teenage decides

Knowing what we can control and what we can't worrying about the things we can't control accomplishes nothing in the world we should know what are the things which we can change and what are the things which we can't In the words of Epictetus "It's not What happen to you but how you react to it that matters "

Buddhism leads us the way where we are able to recognise our desires and emotions and thereby free us from them which is Meditation a most popular mantra used in Buddhism is "om mani padme hum "in which Om is the generosity that purify the Ego of a man.

how you are going to be during the rest of your life. The most important changes in your thought process takes place in your teenager. What happens with you in your teenage, is going to be with you always. And you have to decide how are you going to let that affect you in your further life.

Some people carry the cuts and bruises, which they get in their teenage, for their lifetime. And they feel that hurt again when somebody touches them. They bleed again when somebody scratches them because they never thought about healing them. Instead, tried to hide them, from everybody, from themselves. They cry over them every time they get reminded of them. They feel the hurt every time they think of them.

Then comes the other group of people. Who accept the reality, feel the hurt if it does during the moment, fight through the pain, and recover from it. And when they do, they heal. Yes, the cuts, the injuries which they've got during the teenage get healed. And when they heal, they leave their mark, a scar. A scar which would always remind them of the bad phases they have been through. That they didn't try to escape from the pain but fought against it and won against it. They fought like a warrior. And that makes them special.

Now you'd say that it still has left that scar. Yes, it did. But those scars make them look even more beautiful, like the moon. It gave a feeling of satisfaction, self-sufficiency and made them to believe themselves. Every time that scar was visible to their eyes, it didn't hurt, it didn't bleed, the suffering wasn't eternal. Instead, it reminded them of the most beautiful battle of their life, which they are never going to forget. And every time when they remember it, it's going to make them feel strong. The thought of how fiercely they've fought the darkness of night, leaves their eyes sparkling and proud of themselves.

So, when the train of your life departs the teenage station, you already have with yourself a bag full of experiences. Now how you perceive and comprehend them, defines your further journey.

THINGS WHICH I REALISED WHEN I SAID BYE TO MY TEENAGE:

- Attachment-detachment are a part of life.
- You are self-sufficient.

The Feminist Country

The Feminist Country

Can you see in your mind's eye what will happen if all the women in this world stop working? Like literally stop working not just only at the workspace but also their home. It was 28th November 1980 when Vigdis Finnbogadottir, a single divorced mother who won presidential election of Iceland. She was first female president in Europe and also the first female in the world to be elected as head of the state democratically where she served for 16 years on that post.

But Vigdis contends that she would never have been at that position if the very event of one sun-drenched day which was happened more than 45 years ago on 24th October 1975 when all the women of Iceland went on strike, where they completely refused to work, cook and even looking after their own children. All the women took themselves to the streets to rally for equal rights of women and men. This day for Icelandic people is known as Women's Day Off. It completely petrified the whole country and opened the eyeballs of all men.

All banks, factories and some shops including schools and nurseries had to close leaving fathers with no choice but look after their children. Vigdis with her mother was somewhere in the middle of all the women, who were gathered to sing, listen to speeches and talk about what can be done for women's equality.

There were just three sitting female MPs which is just 5% of the parliament, compared with between 16% and 23% in the other Nordic countries, and this was a major cause of frustration for all the women. Though the event happens to be for only one day but its impact has been lasted to deeply that it completely changed the way of thinking and showed importance of both women and men as pillars in the society. This story drew international attention too.

In its result, when Vigdis stood for the presidential election, she successively got re-elected thrice and won the election twice and according to the reports of World Economic Forum's Global Gender Gap Index Iceland has topped it since 2009. And at the times of the Women's Day Off where only 3 out of 63 members where women have now increased to 28 women.

It is greatly said by Opera Winfrey "ON MY OWN I WILL JUST CREATE, IF IT WORKS, IT WORKS AND IF IT DOESN'T, ILL CREATE SOMETHING ELSE. I DON'T HAVE ANY LIMITATIONS ON WHAT I THINK I COULD DO OR BE."

Unaware of the end, the path

The path we'll create by joining stars

With moon, all, fearlessly we'll share

While keeping our grieving souls bare

Grief which was, was not ours

It was projected, by people with scars

We'll let the dark go with the dark

Dark sides with nights, will go away so far

To the stars, we'll talk

Soothing our eyes as well as our souls

A lot of friends, no efforts to give

We'll wander the place where galaxies live...

LGBTQ: Modern Ray in Primitive Society

LGBTQ: Modern Ray in Primitive Society

India being democratic republic have lengthiest written constitution around the globe. This lengthiest constitution has several features or we can say power which makes it unique among other constitutions. Laws enacted under the supervision of the constitution are mostly those which have already been prevailing in the society. But there are some laws which are against the practices of society but are made for its betterment.

In our constitution discrimination have no place. No matter if it is on the ground of race, gender, caste, Sex etc. Thus, to achieve this goal, the supreme court, the apex court of the country struck down sec 377 of Indian Penal Code which decriminalized the homosexuality. But this judgment is facing criticism at large level. Reason being an orthodox society. India societies are enriched with old customs or rituals, it does not accept the changes easily. It always prefers to stuck to its orthodox practices. Anything new in the society is not easily acceptable no matter if it is for improvement of society or not.

India is the country where you can't discuss about sex openly hence homosexuality is considered to be taboo. Homosexual activities prevailed in India for long-time and it is evident through some famous examples like sculpture embarked on the walls of Khajuraho temple, the great king Bhagirath was the son of two queens. Even after the existence of such activities in primitive society people do not want accept this.

Indian Penal Code is pre-constitutional law and it is still prevailing in our society but it has certain provisions which need to be amended or quashed. So as sec 377 which criminalizes same-sex relation. The Supreme court break the coconut with its unanimous judgement in the case of Navjot Singh Johar v UOI which observed that any major person who have capability to think on his own has right to choose hi life partner. Such a right is incorporated under Article 21 of the constitution.

Restraining same-sex relations is clear violation of Art 15 of the Constitution which have its title of Prohibition of discrimination on the grounds of religion, caste, race, Sex, etc. People of LGBTQ category are normal people, it is just that they have different sexual preferences. These preferences are not abnormal. Such people have never been problem for society in any point. It is very hard for the people who falls in this category to get equal status as of other people in the society. We are in 21st century, and we need to change our mindset towards such people. Along with this legislation need to enact proper law to protect these people and have equal rights as of other people.

The Magic of Thinking Big

Believe you will succeed and you will, this can be done by thinking of success not of failure at your home work place failure thinking can be substituted by success thinking. While facing a difficult situation think of winning instead of losing. When you compete with someone else, think “I am equal to the best”, not “I am outclassed.” When some opportunity comes think “I can do it”, never “I cannot.” Let the master thought, “I will succeed” dominate your thinking process. Remind yourself regularly that you are better than you think, as the success does not require super intellect. Nor is there anything orphic regarding success. Successful people are also the man in the street who developed a belief in themselves that success is in my hand and nowhere else.

When one starts believing, the success comes to a man by itself. Your bigger success will reveal that how bigger your belief was. Underestimating your own intelligence may harm one self and the same can adversely affect the success and similarly never overestimate the intelligence of others. Concentrate on your assets, Discover your superior talents. Instead of worrying about your outcomes, natural endowment or abilities focus on managing your brain. Developing a winning attitude is the superlative path to be successful. Put your intelligence to creative, positive and productive use, use it to find ways to win, not to prove you will lose.

Procrastination is a thief of time

Procrastination is a Thief of Time

Procrastination is like a credit card: it's a lot of fun until you get the bill. Have you ever put off the work or assignments until the deadline or the last date? Or perhaps studied only a day before an important test? This is a habit called Procrastination. The literal meaning of the word is “the action of delaying or postponing something”. We all have been guilty of procrastination at some point in our lives. It is not a rare phenomenon and is seen as a habitual tendency of generally all human beings. In short run, procrastination does not feel like a peril to our success as we get lucky enough to meet our deadlines and complete our commitments. But in a long run, it may prove disastrous to our success as well as our life.

In this 21st century, which is an emerging era of competitions, technologies and advancements, there is a contemporary commodity which tops all the former factors: TIME. Time is the most precious resource to human beings and we as a human being are blessed with the intelligence to make the best use of this resource. Yet we take this precious time for granted and procrastinate. Why? Why humans procrastinate things even after being aware of the value of time? It is the tendency of humans to think that we have enough time and to put things off for the end. There may be varied reasons for doing the same. Some may fear failure while other may feel lazy. While procrastination is a very natural trait commonly shared by us, if it gets out hand it can be quite troublesome for us. Prolonged procrastination can disrupt your life and cause you to lose control of your schedules and deadlines. It may also prove fatal to your success sometimes. So, when the procrastination gets out of your hand, you need to reign it and get back in control. One way to do is to make a to do list for your day or to break down an overwhelming dreaded task into little steps. Changing your work environment may also prove helpful at times. It may help you is boosting your productivity and keeps the motivation levels up to complete the task before the set deadline.

It may take an ample amount of time for you to take control over this habit of procrastination. But in a long run, it will definitely work in your favour to cross the ladders of obstacles and reach the peak of success. Eventually the goal is to eradicate procrastination and become successful. As perfectly said by Sir Benjamin Franklin, “You may delay, but the time will not.”

Mount Kailash: Will it be conquered by the human kind or not?

Mount Kailash; Will it be conquered by the human kind or not?

“Every mountain top is within reach if you just keep climbing”

These encouraging words of Barry Finlay are of no motivational heat when heard with reference to the Mount Kailash because the mountain stands up to 6,714 meters in heights which is nearly 2,135 meters shorter than the Mount Everest but a interesting fact to be noted is that the Mount Everest has been conquered 9,149 times while no human has ever succeeded in conquering the Kailash.

Mount Kailash is a mountain in the Ngari Prefecture, Tibet, China.

It is considered as the abode of Lord Shiva with his family. It is the only holy place for Lord Shiva which doesn't have him in any physical form; there is no temple or “linga” related to Shiva but just a lake called Mansarover which is considered as “Rakshas Taal” due to its peculiar resemblance with sun and moon. But then also it is worshipped as the home of lord Shiva.

It is believed that Kailash is neither on the earth not in the heaven it is the gateway to the heaven. According to various folktales it is considered to be the centre of the world.

Experience of Mountaineers and Scientists:

Herbert Trichy, a geologist tried to climb the summit but faced numerous difficulties. When he asked one of the shepherds of that region that was Kailash climbable or not? He replied that “only a man free sin could climb the Kailash”.

Several Russian climbers tried to climb the mountain in 19th century but mysteriously disappeared.

It is said that Milarepa a buddhist monk of 11th century was able to climb the summit by riding on the sunlight. Very little is known about Milarepa but according to “The life of Milarepa” biography of Milarepa written by Tsangnyon Heruka; he used to be a murderer but later was so influenced by Buddhism that he got converted into one.

Reason:

- The first and the foremost reason is that Mount Kailash is so sacred to four Asian religions of Hinduism, Buddhism, Jainism, and Bon (Tibetan), that climbing it is off limits.

- The severe weather of the Kailash makes it disorienting and misleading for the climbers to find their path to it.
- When Milarepa descended from Kailash he said that no one should ever try to climb the summit of the mountain as it disturbs the divine powers.
- It is believed that the air around Kailash Parbat accelerates ageing as some of the Siberian mountaineers who tried to climb the summit died of old age in spite of being young.
- As Chinese government has banned any such activity near the mountain.

According to me, Mount Kailash would never be climbed and should never be climbed, but nothing should bar the experience divine energy flow and spiritual breeze of the Kailash to sooth the mind and body of its believe

Masculinism

Masculinism

Feminism is a very well-known movements, even the children are well-versed with this term; but masculinism, a concept unheard by the most.

Masculinism is a movement that demands equal rights for men. What? Equal rights for men? How about it. We are already a male dominant society. This is the most common reaction of all and no one is to blame for it as the issue of women rights is very highlighted but there is a most negative mentions about crime against men. After reading this article, I strongly hope that the readers will be forced on to thing from a new perspective.

There is no legislation, absolutely “NO” legislation for men or for the protection of their rights. A general thinking which purports through the Indian Society is that how can a man be abused. Well, this general thinking was shattered when the judgement came in 2015 incident. A girl name Jasleen Kaur put up false allegations against Sarvjeet Singh that he harassed her. The man and his family suffered a lot due to this immoral act of the girl. The man lost is job, his reputation, his social standing due to it.

Another recent highlighted case came where a girl name Priyadarshani Yadav slapped a cab driver 22 times in Lucknow. The cab driver didn't do anything wrong against the girl. Moreover, when the cab driver went to the police station for filing an FIR, even the police did not believe him.

This shows the pitiable constitution of our society where we have given so much rights to women that now men and being the victims of these unchecked freedom to women. According to the recent of National Crime Records Bureau under Section 498A, Indian Penal Code, which provides for the punishment for harassing women for dowry. The data shows that approx. 1 lakh cases are filed annually under it and the conviction rate was only 14% in 2015.

Another NCRB report says that crime against men are rising according to the report in 2019, 1,25,657 men were acquitted from these gender biased laws which is 3 times more than the number of combined cases registered under rape and sexual harassment at workplace.

The laws for protection of women were made for the ones who are actually being persecuted and at peril. But it never reached them and instead was misused by women who wanted to harass someone or to gain benefits out of a man.

Patience and hope

Patience said, "I'm difficult for you" Hope said, "I will make it easy for you".

Patience said, "you Can't handle me." Hope said, "I'll help you to handle it

Patience said, "it's hard for you"

Hope said, "I'll make it right for you."

Patience said, "I'll give you tears."

Hope said, "I'll wipe your tears"

Equality means equal treatment to both and not preferential present treatment to one gender due to a contrary past of the same. Laws made for women must be neutralised to the extent where it is not completely biased against men. After all, its "rights for Women" and not "Punishment for men". Moreover, laws should be made for protecting the interest of men which must act as a deterrence for the women to levy false accusations.

"Men do need rights too."

Patience said, "I and hope work together".

Hope said, "I can't work without patience."

Animal protection - laws a need of the hour or just a propaganda?

Animal protection - laws a need of the hour or just a propaganda?

When it comes to India, it is one of the most bio-diverse countries in the world and consists of 2.4% of the world's land area that amounts for 7-8% of all recorded species.

When we talk about animal protection laws in India the first thing that comes to our mind is article 51(g) of the constitution which is a fundamental duty that each of the Indian Citizen shall be obliged to preserve the environment including forests, lakes, rivers and wildlife and must have compassion for living creatures and the Article also focuses on various rights of the animals in India.

From the time and again till then various laws have been enacted which aim towards the animal protection such Prevention of Cruelty Act, 1960 and Wildlife protection act, 1972.

Now, the question arises do these Animal Protection laws which protect the animal rights are really needed. If, we see in a growing time with the massive growth of civilization and owing to modernization we have been very successful as in determining and framing certain laws so as to ensure the existence of that civil behavior in the society and to make efforts to make the world free of injustice, cruelty and to protect humans from such things we have made certain laws which protect their rights but that is not enough as we see animals are also a living creature and also co-habit and being a member of nature they also deserve certain rights and certain kind of treatment just because of the dominance of human beings in the planet earth and contribution of human race is growing civilization we cannot live in the ignorance we cannot live in the ignorance of the fact that the whole world which on this mother earth depends for its existence on nature of the mother earth and animals form a huge part of existence of nature. There is a saying that if all the animal and species will die or become extinct then end of this world will be as nearly as possible because it would result in loss of vegetation and will eventually result into end,

And also due to growing cases of cruelty, smuggling, sexual violence, manipulation of gender of animals, experiments against animals it is really need to frame such laws towards the protection of animal rights and infect the focus should be made towards making more strict provisions and punishments for such happening as animals and species form a major part of nature and our human race is dependent on the existence and it is not only our duty but also more than that to protect them from injustice towards the.

An ode to all the women

An ode to all the women

"We need to reshape our own perception of how we view ourselves. We have to step up as women and take the lead." - Beyoncé

Keeping this in mind, here's an intimate note to all the young girls and women out there.

You're a learner, expert, energetic, calm, naive, smart, intelligent, beautiful, shy, glamorous, simple, complex, working, homemaker. you're all of this and a lot more. You face a lot of challenges every day. From sending your child to the first day of their school to taking care of your parents, from indulging in pop culture to being an audience to the stage performances of your children. You've done it all. Every single day of your life you put every piece of your heart in whatever you do. The day you feel you're alone, think that you're not and believe in this, because each female goes through the same feeling every day. The way you laugh, smile, care for your family, means the world to us.

But you need to remember, that you cannot forget yourself. You must not deny yourself of anything. Sometimes you need an hour off during your busy day, you need a walking partner at a lazy evening, you need someone to just by. Around you. You deserve it. You deserve all the love the world has to offer. Don't feel guilty about anything. You're a human. A superhuman. A superwoman.

We'll celebrate your every social, economic, cultural and political achievement in life. The shade of your skin, do not define you. The bias in eyes of others for you, do not define you. If you need a hug, there's always going to be someone close to you, you just need to look around. Don't block your feelings until it feels like a burden. You've earned people in your life. You should share whatever you feel. You're too special to the world you're in. And, the joy that your being, brings into this world, you need to feel that yourself.

Good governance emerged as a powerful idea when multilateral and bilateral agencies like the World Bank, UNDP, OECD, ADB, etc. realized that project success substantially depended on conditions of governance in the aid receiving countries. In general, good governance is perceived as a normative principle of administrative law, which obliges the State to perform its functions in a manner that promotes the values of efficiency, non-corruptibility, and responsiveness to civil society. According to the World Bank, governance is "the manner in which power is exercised in the management of a country's economic and social resources for development. Umberto Theory

Umberto Theory

Being a 7th semester law student, a student of one of the most encyclopediac domain, I owe a responsibility of presenting an outlook which could aid the budding batches. Legal profession has crossed that so called stage of criticism where the lawyers are regarded as not so worthy and were given a tag that he/she is a lawyer because he might not have been able to pursue anything else. It must be made clear that one must know how to draw a line of distinction between a lawyer and an efficient lawyer. To be an efficient lawyer it takes your sweat and blood, it takes your expertise over umpteen number of laws, it takes your test of patience, it tests your ability to adhere with the deadlines and most pivotal of all it tests whether or not you as a law student are capable of handling multitude of responsibilities. These responsibilities would range from a good academic history to a good CV keeping that personality of percipient lawyer intact.

To manage getting hold on to this Percipient Personality Trait which I called the PPT, one must know the Interstice Theory. It is brainchild of Umberto Eco, an Italian medievalist, philosopher, semiotician, novelist, cultural critic, & political and social commentator.

Once in an interview with some journalist, Umberto Eco was asked how he manages all these works simultaneously how has he written 45 + books, many collections of essays, articles, research papers along with all other domains he was equipped with. Keeping it very plain and basic Umberto answered, The Interstice Theory. He further explained that interstice is nothing but small spaces and with reference to this theory interstice means small times space. He told the journalist that by the time you reached my apartment using the elevator I finished a small article of mine. This is what exactly the Interstice Theory is. One can manage different works simultaneously, using these interstices. Umberto says if we gather all the interstices from the universe we get ample time to manage the dynamic personality.

So, it would not be wrong if we say that this theory can fit perfectly in the frame of life of a law student. The theory can help you be the brilliant of all, the cogent of all, the dynamic of all, the versatile of all and the outstanding of all. The theory would vouch for the famous quote of Umberto, "Daytime sleep is like the sin of the flesh; the more you have the more you want, and yet you feel unhappy, sated and unsated at the same time."

Passive money – Important or waste of time?

Passive money – Important or waste of time?

Academics? Done, achieved good marks, praises from teachers and fellow students. Applied for internships, working on building a CV, etc. etc. everything that a student does in his student life is done. But, but, but, what about money? what about self-dependency, what about some passive income? Have you r ever thought about it before. I guess many of the students haven't. Students think the concept of passive money in a student's life doesn't work, to be specific students in Rajasthan are gone away with this concern. But what's interesting is passive income teaches you a lot more things than academics and internships do. There are a number of benefits that passive earning can give you in your student life. The best time to achieve your dreams to get your dream gadget, vehicle, or whatever materialistic thing you need in your life with your own money, is through passive money (unless your family is rich enough to give that to you without hesitation). As a student, you are young, inexperienced, and trying to excel in a lot of things. One day you are trying to focus on your studies, and on other days, you are trying to be a "real adult" who is living on his/her own for the first time. It can be difficult to manage it all and put yourself in another role - that of an employee.

Let me get you well versed with the benefits of passive earning apart from financial stability. It helps you become more confident and helps you take on new challenges and responsibilities. Also, it can help you choose a career path, a different one possibly and help you to choose it at an early stage in your life, you can even end up finding your true purpose. And, the most important one, it helps you in improving your work ethics, that's what most of the companies look for in a candidate applying for job, along with the ability to manage time. As a student working part-time, one gets to learn how to manage time between studies, job, and other activities in life.

Passive income may benefit you in a way in which you will end up making new friends communicating to new people, eventually leading you towards having good communication skills, which might in later stages make you a good orator. All of this in the end will help you build a good professional network which would help you in finding your permanent job and eventually lead your career to a greater path.

I would like to take an example of myself, I'm a law student, but I have good skills in the technical field and which helps me make some pocket money for myself for my miscellaneous expenses, also I have made good contacts have learned a lot about how to convince people
